PROFILE

Mr.

IMRAN

Imran is a dedicated development professional with more than ten years of experience in monitoring, research, and institutional development within the microfinance sector. He holds a Bachelor's degree in Anthropology, completed in 2011, which has provided him with a strong understanding of human behavior, social structures, community dynamics, and participatory development approaches. Throughout his career, he has developed strong expertise in data analysis, impact assessment, monitoring, research, and evidence-based decision-making to improve program effectiveness and community outcomes.

As Manager Monitoring and Research at Thardeep Microfinance Foundation, He led research studies, managed monitoring systems, conducted field assessments, and generated analytical reports to support strategic planning and program implementation. His work has involved extensive engagement with vulnerable communities, providing valuable insights into socioeconomic challenges, climate-related vulnerabilities, and sustainable livelihood interventions.

In addition to his core responsibilities, he served as the Environmental and Social Management (ESM) Focal Point at Thardeep, ensuring compliance with environmental and social safeguard policies. In this role, he conducted environmental and social risk assessments, promoted sustainable practices, monitored safeguard implementation, and raised awareness among staff and stakeholders regarding environmental protection and social responsibility.

His commitment to disaster resilience and community development was further demonstrated during the devastating 2010 floods in Pakistan, where he volunteered with a local NGO Root Work Foundation in district Dadu to support relief and rehabilitation activities. This experience provided him a practical exposure to emergency response, community mobilization, humanitarian assistance, and disaster recovery efforts.

Combining his academic background in Anthropology with extensive professional experience in monitoring, research, environmental and social risk management, and community engagement, he is passionate about contributing to initiatives focused on Climate Change, Disaster Risk Reduction (DRR), Environmental Sustainability, Community Resilience, and Sustainable Development. I possess strong analytical, communication, report-writing, and stakeholder coordination skills and am committed to supporting vulnerable communities in building resilience against climate and disaster-related challenges.

Due to his extensive experience in research and monitoring, TalentCore Global has included him as a valuable member of its team.
